

Please implement rules that develop and/or maintain diversity and pluralism in the airwaves. I have paid close attention over the years to the content delivered over the radio, and I have become very discouraged by the DECREASE in the programming available. At the moment, it would appear that ONLY non-profit and public radio stations have any interest in representing the public interest and the many viewpoints contained therein. The companies that own the majority of commercial radio have already made their monopoly apparent by raising ticket prices to their "sponsored" events and keeping the number of less well-known acts and artists out of the public eye (e.g. Clear Channel).
